Soldier is accused of collecting body parts

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

A SOLDIER who fought in Afghanistan has been accused of chopping off the fingers of dead Taliban fighters and keeping them as grim souvenirs.

The unidentified squaddie is a member of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders – also known as 5 Scots – who are based at Howe Barracks in Canterbury.

It is alleged he carried out the shocking mutilation during the battalion's last tour of Afghanistan, which ended in April.

The accusations are particularly serious due to the Muslim tradition that a dead person must be buried with all their body parts.

A spokesman for the Ministry of Defence confirmed that an investigation had been launched into the allegations, and that the Special Investigation Branch – which specialises in cases considered too serious for the Royal Military Police – was also involved.

A spokesman for The Veterans Charity said there was nobody in the Armed Forces who would condone such actions, adding: "That said, unless you have been there, it's impossible to understand the stresses these highly professional soldiers are placed under."

"I would hope the soldier concerned would be offered the proper support if these allegations are found to be true."

The 5 Scots battalion is an air assault infantry group which forms one of seven battalions in the Royal Regiment of Scotland, and has been based in Canterbury since 2003.

The regiment became Britain's lead presence in Helmand, where it traveled with the Royal Highland Fusiliers as part of 16 Air Assault Brigade, last September.

As part of the tour, 5 Scots soldiers took control of mentoring and training duties with the Afghan National Army and Afghan National Police.

Spitfires crash out of Twenty20 quarter final

KENT Spitfires missed out on a place at finals day of the Friends Life t20 competition after falling at the quarter-final stage.

After a strong batting performance, the bowlers were knocked to all parts of the ground in Saturday's game as Leicestershire Foxes won by three wickets.

Captain Rob Key said: "When you lose a big game you want to walk off knowing you couldn't have done any better but when you walk off knowing you could and should have done quite a bit better, it hits you a lot harder."

CINEMA

Electric plans to give seaside town its own cinema again

A new community cinema is opening in Whitstable in September – the first time the town has had its own flicks since 2003 when the Imperial Oyster Cinema closed.

The Whitstable Electric Theatre Company, an independent volunteer-run cinema, will show new releases at the Horsebridge Centre six weeks behind mainstream cinemas.

It also plans to show films for children, and classic movies.

It will open for business on September 9 with a screening of Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides.

Resident Simon Poole, award-winning writer and radio producer and chair of the Whitstable Electric Theatre, said: "We want to cater for everyone in the community. Once we can judge the demand by asking film goers what they want, we will do our best to accommodate a wide range of tastes."

"We hope Whitstable's residents will support us. We have on board some committed members but we are asking for volunteers to join us. In particular, we need an accountant to step in as treasurer, website design help and people to join our committee."

The cinema will start with monthly screenings.

And because Whitstable has such strong links to the horror genre – it was the home of Hammer films star Peter Cushing – one plan is to offer a horror night.

LEGAL

Family's legal battle to ensure that another Sea Cadet doesn't die

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE GRIEVING family of a young Sea Cadet who fell 30ft to his death are taking legal action against the youth organisation.

Jonathan Martin, from Shadoxhurst near Ashford, was killed while taking part in a Sea Cadets festival as part of 150th anniversary celebrations in Portsmouth in May last year.

The 14-year-old was on a ship's mast when he slipped off a rope and plummeted backwards into the deck before falling into the sea.

The Cranbrook School pupil died on the way to hospital from severe chest injuries.

His parents are now suing the Marine Society and Sea Cadets on the grounds that safety procedures on board the ship were inadequate.

Lawyers from Russell Jones and Walker said had the activity been on land, organisers would have had to follow strict safety laws.

Jonathan's father, Andy Martin, told KoS his son's death had had a "devastating" impact on the family.

"This isn't about compensation, we want to see changes made to ensure this kind of thing doesn't happen again," he said.

"It's absolutely vital. The loss of Jonathan has been devastating to our family and we will never get over it. Jonathan loved being a Sea Cadet, but we feel he was let down by a lack of safety precautions which led to this tragedy."

"We hope taking legal action will raise awareness of the need for health and safety guidelines for young people taking part in activities on vessels to be improved."

Jonathan, who had been a member of Ashford Sea Cadets for two years, was among a group of teenagers asked to climb the ship's rigging to gather the sail.

He had seen one of the team struggling and moved across the mast to help, but as he stepped around another Sea Cadet he slipped on a rope and fell backwards, landing on a wheelie bin and rebounding into the water.

Trevor Sterling, of Russell Jones and Walker solicitors, said 'work at height' regulations had not applied because the youngster had been taking part voluntarily.

Mr Sterling said: "The safety harnesses Jonathan was wearing was designed to prevent users getting to a height where they can fall rather than protect a user if they do fall. There was also a lack of adult supervision. We are pushing for the exemptions in health and safety laws and the system of self-regulation to be reviewed so Sea Cadets are as protected as other young people taking part in activities at height on land."

A report into the incident by the Marine Accident Investigation Branch (MAIB) highlighted a

TRAGEDY:

NEWS IN BRIEF

► Charges after shooting

TWO men have been charged with GBH after a man was shot in the head and stomach.

Billy Nelson Smith, 24, of Moorhen Walk in Greenhithe, and 42-year-old Billy Smith, of Hillhouse Road in Stone, appeared at a remand hearing on Thursday at Chatham magistrates' court.

Two women, from Sidcup and Greenhithe, were also arrested.

► Early high-speed start

HIGH-speed train services from Deal and Sandwich are to start on September 5 – one month earlier than planned.

There will also be additional high-speed trains at weekends, starting on September 10.

The new services are being funded by Kent County Council to boost business confidence and support new employment opportunities in east Kent as Pfizer closes its massive drugs research plant.

► Net haul on the river

A DOZEN illegal fishing nets have been removed from the Snodland stretch of the River Medway.

Environment Agency officers say they suspect they were set to illegally trap eels.

When used without authorisation and the appropriate safeguards, illegally set nets can trap a variety of fish species, as well as eels and aquatic mammals. This can seriously damage local wildlife populations.

RESTING PLACE: A TV crew filmed scientists examining the sperm whale which washed up in Ramsgate

Channel 4 team's race against tide to film sperm whale's inner secrets

A SHOW on Channel 4 on Sunday explores the mysteries of the giant sperm whale washed ashore at Pegwell Bay in March.

Inside Nature's Giants sees a team of experts battle through the night against a rising tide to learn all they can about the largest species of predator on Earth. The whale was dead by the time it was spotted washed ashore.

"It was a long way from home and should have been swimming in very deep waters," said Jon Brooks, a member of British Divers Marine Life Rescue. "It's very, very rare to have something of this size wash up in Kent."

When news of the whale broke a Bafta award-winning team from the programme arrived on the scene, consisting of veterinary scientist Mark Evans and comparative anatomist Joy Reidenberg.

The experts realised they had a rare chance to look inside the five-tonne creature.

Little is known about the lives of sperm whales as they are normally hidden deep beneath the ocean waves.

The programme reveals how they manage to survive diving thousands of metres for more than an hour on one gulp of air, in conditions that would freeze human blood and crush our bones.

The scientists are joined by diggers, trucks and a tree surgeon as they find how the largest nose in the world is used to hunt giant squid.

The programme also features biologist Simon Watt tracking whales in the Azores, while Michael Clark shows off whale rectum samples and demonstrates the large number of squid beaks found in a whale's stomach.

The show is broadcast at 9pm.

EXHIBITION

Photographer offers display of faith

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

AN AWE-INSPIRING collection of images exploring the multi-cultural landscape of the world are being displayed on Dover's big screen.

Taken by award-winning photo-journalist Jeremy Hunter, the powerful photographs reveal a snapshot of festivals, rituals and celebrations from 60 countries taken over the past 35 years.

They include images of the Biswa Ijtema Muslim pilgrimage in Bangladesh, to shocking pictures of facial skewering at the Thai Vegetarian Festival.

Let's Celebrate 365 offers a chronicle of the world's diverse religious and political rituals.

Mr Hunter, a former foreign correspondent for NIR-TV in Tehran and later a writer and producer for the BBC, said the exhibition was a photographic exploration of the beliefs and faiths of different cultures and communities.

He said: "It provides an insight into the need for us to respect the differences in these cultures. Perhaps it will help create a better understanding of the essential 'glue' that binds all societies together.

"Gods or no gods, understanding cultural diversity surely enlarges us all."

During his career, Mr Hunter

HIGHER EDUCATION

University to offer cash incentives to high flyers

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

HIGH performing students could be offered a cash incentive to take up places at the University of Kent – regardless of their family's level of income.

Under fee proposals for 2012, those achieving three A-levels at grade A or equivalent will be given scholarships worth £2,000 a year, a move which could entice high-flyers to the Canterbury-based university.

It is the first university in the country to announce plans to offer the cut-price deal, with predictions that many more will follow suit in the overhaul of the system.

The university is also planning to offer a student support package of bursaries and fee waivers totalling £6 million for low-income families from 2012.

Head of admissions and partnership services at Kent, Mary Hughes, said the university had always been committed to offering gifted pupils the opportunity to access higher education.

"Now, with the Office of Fair Access's (OFFA) approval, a greater number of students than ever from low-income backgrounds will benefit from our support package," she said.

Under the reforms, universities will be allowed to take on unlimited numbers of students who achieve top A-level grades, where currently institutions are allocated a fixed number of government-funded places for British students.

Changes to the system will also see extra places for cheaper institutions that charge an average fee of £7,500 or less.

It follows a major shake-up where universities will be able to charge up to £9,000 a year from 2012, a decision by Government that sparked violent protests in London last year.

The county's universities recently announced they would be increasing their fees: University of Kent to the maximum £9,000 for degree courses; Canterbury Christ Church University and University for the Creative Arts £8,500; and £8,300 for students at the University of Greenwich's Medway campus.

Current fees are around £3,500, but if proposals go ahead, high-achieving students at the University of Kent faced with £9,000 fees will be given a £2,000 cash reduction per year in a bid to attract them away from other leading universities.

The high-achiever support package would cost the institution £1m.

OFFA has given its endorsement of the plans, paving the way for the new funding scheme to be put in place next year.

Vice-Chancellor at University of Kent, Professor Dame Julia M Goodfellow, said: "OFFA's approval of our proposed fees and student support package is an endorsement of Kent's continued commitment to widening access in the greater region.

"It is also a vote of confidence for the ambition and quality of our support for students, as well as our teaching and campus facilities."

Moves to offer cash incentives have been criticised by Labour Party members who said money should be spent on widening access to students from poorer backgrounds.

But the University of Kent stressed it was spending £6m to ensure students from poorer families were assisted and that it was widening access by increasing the number of partner schools and colleges in the region from 20 to 40.

A greater number of students than ever from low-income backgrounds will benefit from our support package

MARY HUGHES, HEAD OF ADMISSIONS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF KENT

The Partner Schools' curriculum introduces students to the opportunities of a university education through activities and workshops.

Kent Labour Party spokesman and former MP for Gillingham and Rainham, Paul Clark, said he understood why universities were offering cheaper fees for high achievers.

He said: "With the changes being allowed by Government of fees of up to £9,000, universities are going to be looking at ways to attract students for 2012. There are concerns in terms of the effect these changes are going to have. It will be interesting to see the levels of admissions next year."

FESTIVAL

International flavour to folk festival by the sea

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

BROADSTAIRS Folk Week gets into full swing this weekend.

The event has been attracting visitors to the town for more than 45 years, and festival director Jo Tuffs said: "It started as a dance festival. The founding member was a man called Jack Hamilton. He was a leading light in the English Folk Dancing Society."

"He was looking to start a festival on the South East coast and when he got off the train here he thought it was the ideal place."

Since then the event, which runs until August 12, has grown to include folk music not only from the UK but around the world. This year the music lined up for visitors ranges from Russian gypsy violins and Australian mountain singers, to Barbara Dickson.

So what has been the secret behind the festival's long running success?

FOLKY FUN: Morris dancing near the pier in Broadstairs

The festival attracts traditional music fans from around the country, and Jo said: "People just love the whole week, it is a big part of their lives."

The seaside location and narrow streets of Broadstairs mean there is an event happening around every corner.

"Unlike a festival in a greenfield site with one big stage, we have a lot of free shows in the street and ticketed events indoors. About 60 per cent of the event is ticketed, 40 per cent is free on the street."

Some of the other big names for this year's festival include Chumbawumba, Boo Hewerdine and folk favourites Home Service.

Venues include the 600-seat marquee in Pierremont Park, Broadstairs sailing club, a Methodist church, schools, pubs and bandstands.

The choice of music may mainly be aimed at the folk crowd, but it is a mix designed to appeal as many music fans as possible.

And dance still plays an important part. As well as traditional morris dancing there are groups of Appalachian dancers, clog dancing, and Bollywood workshops.

More than 530 events are expected to take place, with 500 musicians coming to perform during the seven days. Barbara Dickson's concert has already sold out but there are still many other acts to see.

State-of-the-art education centre will keep memories of Battle of Britain heroes alive

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

IT WAS one of the defining moments of British military history, with heroic airmen taking to the skies above Kent in what became known as the battle that saved the world.

In a speech in the House of Commons in August, 1940, the then-Prime Minister Winston Churchill declared that, "never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few" which led to the brave pilots who fought in the Battle of Britain being referred to as The Few.

But with most of the surviving veterans now in their 90s, there are fears that knowledge of the critical point in World War Two could begin to fade.

In a bid to keep the memory of The Few and all those who helped in the Battle of Britain alive, a unique learning centre is being created at the National Memorial for The Few at Capel-le-Ferne, between Dover and Folkestone.

While the plans were announced more than a year ago, momentum is now building with planning permission due to be submitted in just months.

Hopes are the centre, which is expected to cost in the region of £1.5 million with the majority from donations and fundraising, will be opened in 2015, the 75th anniversary of the famous battle.

The Battle of Britain Memorial Trust launched an appeal to raise £650,000 to help fund the centre and is preparing to put in a bid for Heritage Lottery Funding once a planning application is submitted to Dover District Council.

A meeting was held with residents living near the memorial site last week to discuss progress.

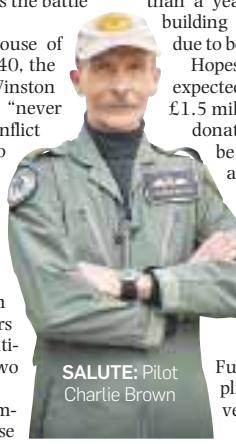

Secretary of the Trust, Patrick Tootal, who is also secretary of the Fighter Association, said: "We're trying to fill in the gaps. This isn't a museum. They have their role to play, but what we are creating is something different where people can almost relive a day-in-the-life of The Few," he said.

"The idea is to keep the memory alive. I don't believe young people aren't interested; once they are told about something their interest is intense."

People say the Battle of Trafalgar saved the nation and the Battle of Britain saved the world. This education centre is important for teaching young people about it."

The centre, which has been designed by architects Godden Allen Lunn in the shape of the iconic Spitfire wing, will be created as a living history resource that will use film, walk-through displays and modern technology to recreate the historic Battle of Britain.

Mr Tootal said it would bring to life

A FATHER and daughter duo have been sentenced for money laundering the proceeds of an international drug trafficking plot.

Derek Rosser, 63, and daughter Nicola Rosser, 36, were sentenced at Canterbury Crown Court for laundering thousands of pounds of cash into euros.

The father was handed a two-year jail sentence for being in possession of criminal property – £93,600 – and a further five sentences of eight months each to run concurrently.

These were in relation to three offences of converting criminal property – changing into euros, and a further two offences of possession of criminal property – £4,000 and €2,000 found at his home.

Nicola Rosser was given an eight-month sentence, suspended for two years, for three offences of converting criminal property – changing it into euros. In addition, she was handed a six-month night-time curfew and must pay £250 costs.

The court heard how Nicola Rosser used her training in money laundering from her job in a casino to her advantage, working closely alongside her father.

On June 29 last year, the father and daughter were stopped in their car on the Thanet Way near Faversham.

Police searched the vehicle and discovered a blue drawstring bag containing £9,300 in cash. Neither would explain why they had the money, so both were arrested on suspicion of money laundering.

A later search of a vehicle belonging to Nicola Rosser revealed documentation relating to three cash transactions on 28 June, 2010, in which £18,420.24 in euros was bought.

CCTV from two of the money shops revealed Nicola Rosser as the person buying the euros.

When police searched the home of Derek Rosser at Waterways Caravan Park, Reculver, near Herne Bay, they seized a blue cash box containing £4,000 and €2,000.

Derek Rosser pleaded guilty to three charges of converting criminal property and three charges of possession of criminal property under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002.

Nicola Rosser, of King Street, Margate, admitted three charges of converting criminal property.

Skinner hopes Archbishop's up for game of Quidditch during interview

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

STAND-UP comedy star Frank Skinner says the Archbishop of Canterbury should take a leaf out of Harry Potter's book and rediscover the "weirdness" of religion.

The popular comic is due to be interviewed by Dr Rowan Williams as part of a two-day festival at Canterbury Cathedral next month, and he told KoS he expected the pair's faith in God to play a major role in the discussion.

But Skinner said he would not allow the event to become too serious.

"I guess we will talk about the fact there's not enough religious people around any more, and what went wrong," he said.

"I think the PR has been pretty bad and people don't seem to like religion now, but they like Harry Potter and that's because Harry Potter has all the magical weird stuff we used to have."

"I think we need to get that back, so perhaps the Archbishop and I should have a game of Quidditch to mark the occasion."

"But I want people to know that it's okay to be religious and also have a laugh, play football and swear a bit, too. You don't have to walk around with your hands clasped together looking at the clouds."

Skinner has been a devout Roman Catholic since childhood and relied heavily on his faith in his battle against alcoholism. He told KoS he had no problem discussing his faith with non-believers, and even joking about it during his stand-up performances.

"I think the temptation for religious people is to keep their mouths shut because they're worried people will think they're weird," he said.

"But everywhere I've been, whether in school, at the factory or down the pub, I've felt like a bit of a weirdo anyway."

"I think you should embrace the weirdness, and I'm very happy to be a strange outsider. Occasionally I bring religion up in my shows because even people who are not very keen on it find it quite interesting, much in the same way as I would be interested in hearing about it if you told me you liked visiting fetish pubs in Maidstone."

Skinner's appearance at Canterbury Cathedral on Friday, September 16, follows a similar sell-out event in 2009, involving Dr Williams and the editor of Private Eye magazine, Ian Hislop.

And despite recognising the Pope rather than the Archbishop as the spiritual leader of Christianity, the comic said the opportunity to sit down with the head of the Anglican church was too good to pass up.

"I've been interviewed by the likes of Michael Parkinson and Graham Norton in the past, but the Archbishop is definitely up there with the best of them," he said.

"There's no turning down an invitation to take part in something like this at Canterbury Cathedral. However, I am thinking about reclaiming the cathedral for the Roman church."

The In Conversation event forms part of a two-day festival organised by the Diocese of Canterbury called The Gathering. Tickets can be purchased at www.canterburydiocese.org/thegathering.

COASTAL TRAIL

Shooting fans are 'treated like second class citizens'

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

RURAL campaigners have accused the Government of "shameful" treatment of owners of countryside sporting rights as plans for an all-England walkers' coastal trail move forward.

The Countryside Alliance said people legally allowed to shoot on coastal land are being treated as second-class citizens, with no rights to make formal objections to the proposals.

The comments came as Natural England prepared for what it described as "walking the course" where officers will visit coastal land likely to be affected in Kent.

The planned coastal access path – which will form part of an unbroken trail around the UK – will run 39km from Ramsgate Pier to Folkestone.

A Natural England spokesman said options for improving access would be discussed with people who own and manage the land. A 12-week public consultation is due in late 2011.

NO MORE: The UK coastal path will affect shooters' rights

Kent is one of the first stretches of coast to become part of the new trail, with completion expected in 2014.

But while Natural England stressed the path would give people the right to roam the coastline in places currently off-limits, others were opposed because of the impact it would have on residents, landowners and those who have sporting rights, which allow shooting.

South East regional director of the Countryside Alliance, Michelle Nudds, said owners of sporting rights were treated as second class citizens.

"Owners of sporting rights cannot make formal objections and as such have no access to the independent appeals process because the law does not classify them as having a 'relevant interest', she said.

"Despite this shameful situation, it is essential that residents who own sporting rights in coastal areas participate in the consultation process."

The British Association for Shooting and Conservation's Dr Conor O'Gorman said: "If a person's shooting interests are on potentially affected land they should get involved at this early planning stage."

The coastal path, made possible due to the Marine and Coastal Access Act 2009, will open up miles of coastline, and existing trails which erode into the sea will be replaced, creating an unbroken trail.

It could stretch up to four metres wide and would include a 'spreading area' in places, to allow access to cliffs, dunes, mud-flats, saltmarshes and beaches.

Stella Swinburne, McCarthy & Stone retirement apartment owner.

My story?

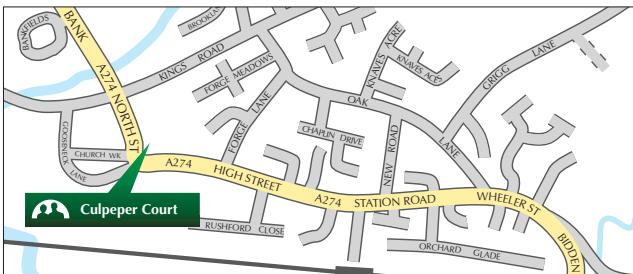

"Time and money. Two things I wish I had more of before I moved and now I have both

I lived in a three bedroom bungalow before I bought my apartment but it's amazing how the little jobs that need doing add up. I was forever forking out for someone to fix this or that. Now I don't have to worry about a thing. I reckon I'm at least £50 a month better off since moving. No gas bills as everything is electric. Just one service charge means no separate water rates, no individual window cleaner or gardener to pay for. And as for external maintenance that's all included. Even my personal alarm I used to carry with me is redundant thanks to the 24-hour emergency call system. Saving money has also given me more time to enjoy myself and that's worth more to me than anything else.

Cash boost to help declining seaside towns

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

STRUGGLING seaside towns could receive a share of £2.3 million to help revive parts of Kent's ailing coastline.

From April, 2012, voluntary and charitable groups will be able to bid for funding for green projects aimed at supporting communities and reversing the decline in many of the county's seaside districts.

The cash initiative, which was announced in Thanet – the 49th most deprived district in the country – by economic secretary Justine Greening MP, looks to target towns on the coast that have become too dependent on a dwindling tourism industry and have spiralled into deprivation.

WASHED UP: Margate is in need of a revival

South Thanet Tory MP Laura Sandys, who helped spearhead a campaign aimed at getting a fairer deal for seaside areas, said coastal towns should be more than just "good places to holiday".

"They must be places we all want to live, work and establish businesses in," she said. "With this funding, the local voluntary groups at the heart of Thanet and east Kent will be able to build on their Big Society activism. The tide is changing for the better in seaside towns across the UK."

Voluntary groups will be able to bid for funding through the Big Lottery Fund. The money is designed to support the growth of coastal communities and will be available to help projects aimed at developing renewable energy or environmental maintenance and improving skills.

At a coastal towns roundtable meeting at the Department for Communities and Local Government, involving Ms Sandys, recommendations were discussed drawing on examples from a study by the Margate Renewal Partnership.

The key issues surrounded Cliftonville West and Margate Central, which have a dependency on a declining tourism sector, an unbalanced housing market, the arrival of economic migrants and vulnerable groups, and high levels of crime.

Shared Intelligence, the organisation commissioned to carry out the study, said the Margate Renewal Partnership, Thanet District Council and Kent County Council had worked hard to sort out the problems. But the study found they had not fundamentally tackled the key drivers of decline.

Shared Intelligence said: "The economy remains over-reliant on public services and the declining tourism sector; housing improvement work has been on too limited a scale to shift the balance in the housing market; and significant numbers of vulnerable adults and children from outside Thanet continue to be placed in the district."

Amusement arcades' new stake

SITTINGBOURNE and Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson has welcomed a change in the law that will see the maximum slot machine stake rise from £1 to £2. He said: Amusement parks are an important part of our leisure and tourist industry, particularly on Sheppey, and I hope these changes will give our hard-pressed amusement industry a big fillip."

Condemning barbaric trade

YOUR report in last week's KoS is disingenuous. The majority of animals exported through Ramsgate have been calves, many from Ireland, and for further transport to Spain or Italy.

Furthermore, there is no guarantee the exported sheep will be sent to slaughterhouses, but rather to the 'amateur' killer for the barbarity of ritual slaughter.

The journey times and welfare of which your tame farmer speaks are fantasy.

I have witnessed the Joline (the nautical equivalent of a skateboard) pitching and rolling in the English Channel while the lorries and their animals are covered in spray.

There are often delays before unloading and distances to and from the ports must be horrendous for the animals.

I have nothing but condemnation for those who support and facilitate this cruel and barbaric trade.

Judith Gunn,
by email

On a slow boat to slaughter

WELL what a load of rubbish quoted by Frank Langrish (KoS, July 31).

I have witnessed these animals arriving in the early hours of the morning, crying and very smelly.

They have travelled from their pick-up point which could be anywhere such as Wales, Devon or Gloucester down to Ramsgate, some arriving as early as 12.45am, then they stay in the trans- porters as there is no provision for unloading.

It takes roughly four hours to cross from Ramsgate to Calais as the ship Joline does not go very fast and sometimes she has been unable to berth due to another ship being there.

Just last week there were two shipments during a 36-hour period; the second load arrived late afternoon at 5.15pm (it was due in at 4pm), but was not allowed to come into Ramsgate until 9pm. The ship broke down and could not get into its usual berth in Calais until noon the next day.

So can Mr Langrish work out how many hours that is from point of pick up to Ramsgate, the waiting around and then slow boat to Calais, not including where they travel to after Calais?

Mrs R Bane, By email

School's out, so no problem

"WHO wants cars travelling fast past schools?" says Stuart Jeffery of the Green Party.

Does it really matter when they are shut on school holidays, at night time and weekends – is 30mph then too fast?

Have the six schools chosen for this trial (the 70mph speed limit was a 'trial' in 1965) been part of "Maidstone's appalling accident record" as you state on your website?

Let us have some real hard facts, not emotive rhetoric.

This is just a Trojan horse to get rid of all 30mph limits and downgrade them to 20mph, to "encourage walking and cycling" as it says on the Green's website.

Strange how with so much 'public support' for all these speed limits that we need so many speed cameras?

Seems to me there is not much 'public support' for this and many other speed limits.

Terry Hudson, Herne Bay

Our youth will pay a high toll

ON Monday, I attended a meeting at County Hall in Maidstone in order to listen to the debate on proposals for cuts in youth services.

It may be dressed up as "improvements" but the reality is many youth centres will close. I had taken the trouble to read the consultation paper and had questions I hoped would be answered. I do not have a political agenda and I am not involved in youth services but still feel angry over what I have witnessed.

I have a small business and I if I am not prepared when presenting I will be ripped apart by a potential investor. What I saw shows me that being inept and having done little research does not matter when most councillors are on your side.

My questions were simple and were thankfully the same as ones raised by three young people, some older heads with experience, the chairperson and one member of the committee.

The report was detailed whilst being completely vague. How many jobs are to be cut? How did they decide which centres to keep and which to cut? How can a privately commissioned organisation be more effective than what is in place already? If a private company wanted to get involved in youth work, and there was no evidence to support this, surely they would only do this to make a profit. Most concerning to me was a flow chart. It showed what would happen to centres not able to be farmed out to private organisations and voluntary groups. They would be sold.

I don't think anyone who opposed the cuts had any doubt voluntary organisations do a great job. However, they need support from KCC staff.

Members of the committee stated constantly the service was superb so why spoil it? Kent is one of the lowest funded councils in the country for Youth Services so why cut any more. I have met a few young people in the last few weeks who have benefited from the centres.

The one thing they shared was a passion for the service. These are people who could have gone the wrong way and cost fortunes more to deal with later.

This was my first council meeting and I had expected a different outcome. The idea was to debate the proposals in the consultation document. The reality was somewhat different. Six witnesses were called to make points on the plan. The first three were young people who had not attended a meeting like this before. It turned out that the young people were to be questioned/grilled, not the consultation paper. A number of the Conservative members asked questions. My blood started boiling at this point. I don't think that these young people need to be patronised and bullied in any way but they were. Their political motives were questioned and the words "narrow minded" were used to describe people who were only trying to raise issues about a paper. Members of the committee had conversations amongst themselves whilst speeches were being made and one even had a phone call. The young people were a credit and the councillors a disgrace.

I was stunned by what transpired. One member made the point the document was thorough and he could not see any reason to delay. He was clear, and this was the general consensus, that the document marks the way forward.

The next man to speak was completely out of touch with reality. This fine citizen actually raised the point that funds should be split evenly across all boroughs and areas. He was adamant that deprived areas and young people with little to look forward to should have no special treatment.

I was shocked at the self centred narrow mindedness of these ignorant and inept representatives of Kent. The whole "we're in this together" rubbish is clearly a fantasy when they are so out of touch with reality.

I would urge as many people as possible to look at what is happening. We are talking about cutting £1 million. It is a drop in the ocean. The council has a surplus fund of £30m. Invest it wisely for a change and it could save the youth services; or maybe they just don't want to.

Career in foster care is more rewarding than you'd think

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

BEING a foster carer is a unique and multi-faceted role which, as well as bringing huge benefits to the children, can also be extremely rewarding for the adults involved.

Love and care are essential to our well-being. Adults and children alike consistently seek them, but when it comes to children, special attention is critical.

According to the Children's Workforce Development Council, which aims to help young people growing up in England, many people do not even consider fostering as being an actual role or indeed a career, but what carers do on a day-to-day basis as part of looking after the children they have easily equates to being a full-time job in itself.

The council says that it is one of the few roles which can be seen as a career based in your own home. It involves you working closely with other professionals in social services, education, health-care services and sometimes the police and legal system.

Fostering – or foster care – is a way of providing family life for a child or young person who cannot live with his or her own parents.

It is often used to provide temporary care while parents get help sorting out problems or take a break; also, it can help the child or young person through a difficult period in their lives.

When a child is in foster care, the child's parents or the local authority still have legal responsibility for them. In most cases when a child is adopted, all legal responsibility for the child passes to the new family. The local authority and the birth parents no longer have formal responsibility. It is as though the child had been born into that family.

There are many different types of fostering:

- Emergency: where children need somewhere safe to stay for a few nights.
- Family and friends or 'kinship' fostering.

where children who are looked after by a local authority are cared for by extended family members or people they already know and who are then approved as foster carers specifically for that particular child.

- Fostering for asylum-seeking children.
- Long-term or full-time fostering: this is where the child or young person lives with the foster carer on a long-term or full-time basis, ideally until they reach adulthood or are ready to live independently.
- Private fostering: where the parents make an arrangement for the child to stay with someone else who is not a close relative and has no parental responsibilities, and the child stays with that person – the private foster carer – for more than 27 days.
- Remand fostering: where young people in England or Wales are 'remanded' by the court to the care of a specially-trained foster carer.

- Short breaks (sometimes called respite): these provide opportunities for disabled children to have enjoyable experiences which help them become more independent and form friendships outside their family.
- Short-term: where carers look after children for a few weeks or months while plans are made for the child's future.
- Specialised therapeutic fostering: foster care for children and young people with very complex needs and/or challenging behaviour; usually where the foster carer is trained in therapeutic interventions.

Some of the most vulnerable children in need of fostering are those who have travelled to the UK in search of asylum.

SUPPORT:
The role of the foster carer can involve many aspects requiring you to work closely with other professionals in social services, education and sometimes the police, giving you a full-time career but based in your own home

Help, support and advice for carers

MANY children in care come from a background where they have been exposed to some degree of trauma, neglect or abuse. This means it is even more important for foster carers to be well trained and ready to give vulnerable children a home. One Kent fostering group offers training and support for foster carers as well as therapy and support. The Caldecott Fostering Service in Ashford offers its carers expert advice and home visits by therapy professionals. Erica Eversfield, head of fostering, said: "The Caldecott Fostering Service has an extremely high success rate. What makes this possible and sets us apart is that we make it our mission to personally know and care about our carers and children."

• Visit www.thecaldecottfoundation.co.uk.

They will have travelled long distances to reach this country and often be without any family or friends.

They may not speak English and can be frightened and confused when they arrive. They may be in a state of shock because of their experiences – especially if they have fled from a war zone or a natural disaster.

There is a certain elation to be had on the part of carers from knowing they 'saved' a child. An unhappy child is something no one wants to see and when a child is placed in foster care many foster parents receive a great deal of inner fulfilment from knowing they have contributed to the removal of this sadness.

There is also the great relief of knowing this removal can be permanent because of their contribution to the future life of a child.

Why did the Leeds turn down my cash?

QI have more than £10,000 in a cash Isa with Nationwide that pays 2.75pc interest. I have been looking for something better, and found an Isa from Leeds Building Society that pays 3.25pc. I planned to move the cash into my Nationwide current account and then transfer it to the Leeds, but this is where I hit a problem. The Leeds would let me open an Isa, but it would not let me transfer my existing Isa savings. Why would any bank or building society ever refuse a deposit of more than £10,000 in the current economic climate?

AThe Leeds has actually done you a huge favour by turning down your money. The only way to transfer cash from an existing Isa to a new Isa is to leave it up to the new bank or building society to arrange the paperwork with your existing Isa provider. The money must never be under your own control. If you had gone ahead with your plan to transfer the cash into your Nationwide current account and then on to the Leeds, you would have lost your Isa tax exemption and you would have had to start all over again, building up a tax-free nest egg. The most we are all allowed to pay into a cash Isa is £5,340 a year, so some of your savings interest would have become taxable. But this is not why the Leeds turned you away. Some banks and building societies prefer new savings. They do not want to transfer in "hot" money that they suspect will be transferred out again as soon as someone comes up with an account that offers a fraction more interest. Apart from preventing you throwing away your tax exemption, the Leeds has done you another favour, since you can actually beat its interest rate of 3.25pc. Chelsea Building Society will pay you 3.3pc interest on its fixed-rate cash Isa that matures in August next year. The account can be operated by post or through a branch.

QI have heard conflicting reports about cheques. Some people believe they are going to be abolished, but others say not. As a pensioner who has no internet bank account and no computer, either, I send cheques to my grandchildren for birthdays and Christmas. How could I do this if cheques are abolished?

AThere has been a lot of confusion over cheques, so here are the facts. The banks did plan to scrap cheques, but faced with mounting protests, they have backed down. The banks now say that cheques will stay for as long as customers need them – so you can keep sending them to your grandchildren, and they can keep banking.

them. There is one fly in the ointment, though. The banks have done away with the guarantee card that promised shopkeepers your cheques would be honoured. This piece of plastic will no longer work, which means most shops will refuse to accept cheques. As time passes, it looks likely that the reason you want to keep cheques – for sending gifts to your family – will become almost their only real use.

QI have an unusual question for you. I read that Irish government bonds have fallen to about 70pc of their face value. Does this mean that if I invest now, I will get back 100pc in 2020 when the bonds mature, and meanwhile I would get 4.5pc interest? I know this would be a gamble. I accept the risks and will not blame you if Ireland goes bankrupt.

AIreland has the euro as its currency, and since you wrote to me, there have been fresh worries over whether the euro can survive. The Irish treasury's 2020 bonds have fallen further, to about 64 euros. If there is no further euro-crisis, and if Ireland's own economy improves – or gets no worse – then yes, you would get 100 euros in 2020 for every 64 euros invested today, plus annual interest of 4.5pc. But those are big 'ifs', so invest only if you can afford the risks.

QI am owed money by a small company that seems to have vanished. What is the procedure for finding the owner's name, so I can sue him or her?

AGo to www.companieshouse.gov.uk and click on 'search company information'. This will show whether the company is still active. For a small payment, you can also find the names and addresses of the directors and shareholders. But seek legal advice, as normally you can only sue the limited company itself and not its bosses.

First-time buyers' credit-record fear

By Adam Aiken
MyMoney 24 editor

FIRST-TIME buyers are being held back by a lack of awareness surrounding credit data, according to a leading provider of credit information.

Although the first-time buyer market has expanded rapidly in recent months, with a growing number of mortgage products available for borrowers, Equifax said it thought many people could be missing out on the most competitive deals because they do not understand the importance of their credit information.

Recent research by Equifax into the credit card market suggested that a third of those declined for card applications did not know why they had been turned down. Neil Munroe, the company's external affairs director, said he was concerned the same situation could exist with first-time mortgage borrowers.

"It's vital that first-time buyers understand what information is used by mortgage providers to assess their creditworthiness, as well as how they can make sure their credit rating is at its best for them to get the most favourable deal," Mr Munroe said.

"Something as simple as the fact that they are not registered on the electoral roll could hamper an individual's ability to gain a good mortgage. Or it might be that a credit agreement they had forgotten about is showing as having an outstanding balance which could count against them."

"We recommend first-time buyers check their credit report before they start applying for mortgages. And if their application is refused, they should stop applying and ask why."

The credit reference agencies are Equifax (visit www.equifax.co.uk) or call 0844 335 0550), Experian (visit www.experian.co.uk or call 0844 481 8000) and Call Credit (visit www.callcredit.co.uk or call 0870 060 1414).

Credit reports include information on existing and former credit accounts, county court judgments, credit 'searches' of your data by lenders and any shared financial commitments.

For a statutory fee of £2 per agency, you can apply for a copy of your credit file. Although much of the data held by them will be the same, it can be worth requesting your file from all agencies to pick up any anomalies.

If you spot anything untoward on your file – such as a search of your data that you did not authorise – it can alert you to potential fraud.

Meanwhile, you are given the opportunity to correct any incorrect information held about you.

Car insurance rarely covers glovebox items

MOTORISTS are leaving hundreds of pounds worth of items in their cars, often on open display to potential thieves.

And many of them have no idea whether or not their insurance would cover them if their cars were to be broken into.

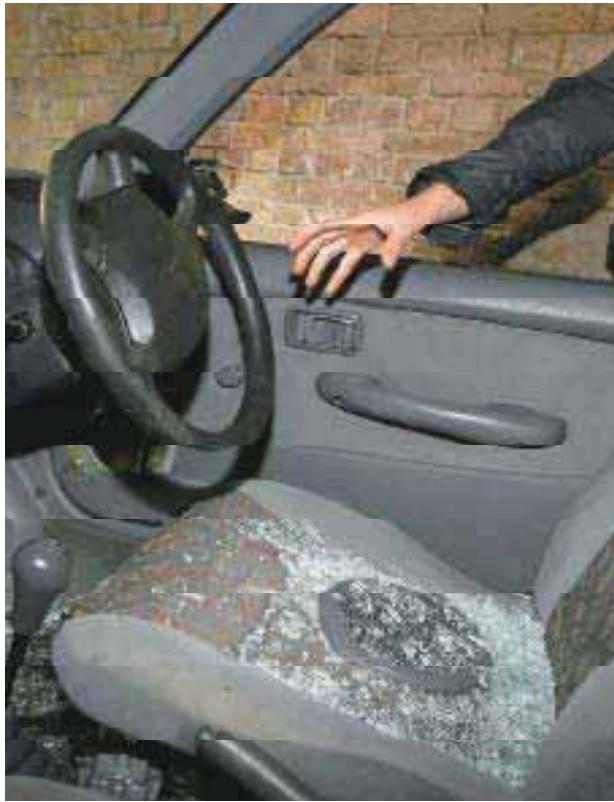

Motorists stash, on average, £278-worth of belongings in their cars – the most common being satellite navigation systems, mobile phones, and wallets. Nearly three quarters of people don't know what cover they have for things left in their cars.

Gloveboxes contain, on average, £112-worth of goods and younger people are much more likely to leave such possessions in their unattended cars. The same sort of items are left in car boots, but golf clubs and power tools are often added to the list.

Lee Griffin, from Gocompare, said: "Most of us own a range of highly portable and desirable gadgets which are small enough to stash in our glovebox or boot."

"The purpose of car insurance is to give you financial protection for your vehicle, not the stuff you keep inside it."

"Cover for personal belongings is typically limited to fully comprehensive policies and restricted to about £100. Cover rarely extends to money or business goods or items not in a locked boot."

TARGET FOR THIEVES: Many drivers are leaving their valuable possessions worth hundreds of pounds in their cars, often on display to would-be thieves

Saga secures 6 per cent cut of homecare market

By Simon Robinson

simon.robinson@archant.co.uk

THE Saga Group is set to become the UK's biggest homecare-provider when a £107 million take-over is completed.

The Folkestone firm, which also has interest in the holidays, insurance, savings and financial-advice sectors, will raise its UK market share to 6 per cent through the acquisition of Allied Healthcare International Inc.

The terms of the agreement have been rubber-stamped by both parties – for a fee of $3.90 per share.

Allied shareholders are expected to give the takeover their seal of approval in the autumn, at which time the New York-registered company's 9,000 staff employed at 120 branches throughout the UK would transfer over to Saga.

Saga Healthcare chief executive John Ivers said: "Our strategic intent has been to grow our healthcare division organically and through carefully-selected acquisitions. I am therefore delighted Allied is joining the Saga Group."

"Saga will be the UK's pre-eminent provider of domiciliary care. We are creating a nationally-recognised and trusted provider of quality care in the home. I look forward to welcoming the staff and customers of Allied to the Saga family – working together we have an exciting future."

DEAL: Folkestone-based Saga Group hopes to buy Allied Healthcare in a £107 million deal. The firm's market share would rise to 6 per cent.

Saga's head of communications Paul Green added: "The proposed take-over would give Saga a 6 per cent market share of the domiciliary-care business in the UK, making us the biggest individual provider."

"The homecare business has been expanding rapidly in the UK and we view this acquisition as an extremely important third leg of our business, alongside our iconic holiday brand and financial services. It means 77 per cent of the UK will now be within a 20-minute drive of one of our branches."

Allied chief executive Sandy Young said: "We are pleased to have entered into a transaction that will offer Allied shareholders an attractive valuation."

"After a robust examination of the strategic alternatives available to the company, our board unanimously concluded that this transaction is in the best interests of our company and shareholders."

The company's chairman, Dr Jeffrey Peris, added: "Saga's acquisition of Allied provides the opportunity to realise value for our shareholders by leveraging Allied's quality achievements, operational excellence and our talented personnel while continuing to meet our customers' healthcare needs."

Allied operates a community-based network of nurses and specialised medical personnel to locations covering 90 per cent of the UK population.

The Saga Group is the UK's leading provider of products and services specifically designed for people aged 50 and over and boasts more than 2.7 million customers.

DONATION

PCs and printer given to charity

EDWARDS Harvey PR & Marketing has donated all of its old office equipment to charity.

The Maidstone consultancy gave the hi-tech haul to Computers 4 Africa, which is dedicated to helping African children who are living in poverty.

The equipment includes 14 computers, a scanner and a printer, and associated accessories.

Edwards Harvey managing director Pip Clarkson said: "We chose to support Computers 4 Africa because the work they do literally transforms impoverished communities."

"Computers are rare in Africa – most schools simply can't afford them – and yet access to IT training can make a huge difference to an underprivileged child's future. It's good to know that we're helping to give youngsters a better start in life."

Computers 4 Africa, which is based in Aylesford, collects redundant electrical equipment free of charge and ships out all usable donations to specific projects in Africa.

Start-ups offered business boost

BUDGING entrepreneurs can get top tips on how to make it in business at a series of monthly workshops organised by Medway Council and Lloyds TSB.

Bank experts will be on hand to offer guidance to anyone thinking of starting their own business as part of the council's Partners For Growth Start Up grants scheme, designed to give fledgling firms a financial boost of up to £1,000.

Medway Council's economic-growth boss Jane Chitty said: "There has been a diverse range of start-up companies here in Medway."

"It is our priority to help them grow, to keep local business talent and help support the jobs that these companies create."

Lloyds TSB's Trevor Shave added: "This reinforces the bank's commitment to SMEs and, in particular, the continued regeneration of the Medway economy, brought about by investing in new business start-ups."

For more information on the workshops, email info@bsk-cic.co.uk.

GROWTH

Basepoint handed keys to The Base

A BUSINESS start-up centre has been opened.

Basepoint Business Centres, which operates four other similar hubs across the county, took the keys to The Base, in Dartford, from the South East England Development Agency (SEEDA).

SEEDA development director Jonathan Sadler said: "SEEDA is delighted The Base is now complete and is already 37 per cent occupied."

"This will provide much-needed support for the growth of the local economy. SEEDA is proud to have led this development, which is a testament to the strong relationship we have with our partners on this project."

The Basepoint's Alison Sweeney, who will manage The Base, added: "Dartford has a strong business community, and the number of enquiries we have already received from local SMEs proves that."

"We hope to create a hub for entrepreneurs and encourage the business community in the area to grow even further."

RETAILProfits rise at outlet centre

THE Ashford Designer Outlet Centre recorded a 10 per cent year-on-year sales rise.

The shopping centre, which houses 80 leading retail brands, also saw footfall in June increase by 13 per cent on June 2010.

McArthurGlen, which runs the store, said the upturn was due to the recession as well as holidays and summer weddings.

Ashford centre manager David Maddison said: "We're always working to ensure we provide the best possible outlet shopping experience for our customers."

"We offer more than 80 leading premium and high-street brands, meaning our shoppers know they will find a wide range of excellent fashions, for less."

"The centre's footfall and sales performance during June has been very strong, with brands such as Phase Eight, Ted Baker and Tommy Hilfiger all satisfying an increased demand for glamorous occasion wear as the wedding season gets into full swing."

FINANCEParents set for money talks

WITH the recession making money-management an increasingly essential skill, more and more parents are passing good-practice tips on to their children.

Research carried out by Capital One found that 72 per cent of parents in the South East plan to have a financial chat with their youngsters this summer.

While many said that passing on money-saving advice would help their children in the future, almost half of all parents in the region (47 per cent) said they did not know what basic terms like 'APR' (Annual Percentage Rate) or 'PPI' (Payment Protection Insurance) stood for.

Capital One's Brian Cole said: "It's encouraging to see that during difficult financial times, financial education is high on parents' agenda. We hope that our Credit Made Clearer programme will arm parents with the knowledge they need."

The advice is available via facebook.com/capitaloneuk.

EXPANSIONFalcon Forge forges ahead

ARCHITECTURAL metalwork firm Falcon Forge is set to spread its wings by launching a new design company.

The Edenbridge business's offshoot, Tercel Design, will specialise in creating bespoke upmarket furniture for interior designers and private customers.

Managing director Moira Dyson said: "Falcon Forge has successfully forged close links with a very wide customer base, right up to the likes of Arundel Castle and the Brompton Oratory in London.

"With Tercel Design, we're starting another new venture – based on some exciting new talent in the shape of a young designer working alongside a fabric specialist and glazier.

"Falcon Forge will be the manufacturing arm, with Tercel fronting it through its brand-new design studio."

Moira and partner Mike Dyson took over Falcon Forge four years ago and relocated the business from Caterham to Edenbridge, with help from Business Link.

Bank's message to its customers: 'Come talk to us'The BIG Interview

Banks have been accused of everything over the past years; from causing recession to starving ailing firms of cash until they fail. Not surprisingly, Warren Mulvihill, NatWest's regional director for commercial banking, has a different view. Business Week spoke with the man heading a team of 110 people looking after the county's small to medium firms as they plot a course for growth after the crash of 2007

WARREN Mulvihill makes no attempt to claim times are not tough for Kent businesses.

But he insists we are turning the corner.

"Kent's role in the national economy is rather underrated – perhaps because it still has that Garden of England label," he said. "But I think we are more of an engine room than the rest of the nation thinks. We are close to London, which perhaps helps us punch harder economically, though it might mean being overshadowed by our neighbour, too."

"Despite the national situation, Kent is already making headway against strong winds. Nationally, though, the next couple of years are still going to be tough, especially as Government austerity measures start to bite, but they should foster sustainable growth from late 2012/early 2013."

"I went into NatWest straight from school 29 years ago, so I remember the previous recession, but it's been different this time. There are many global factors in play and it can be unsettling to hear so many opinions on how we got there and how we get out."

"In the recession of the late 80s and early 90s, Britain was hit hard by high interest rates. This time rates are very low, but prices from raw materials and services have been going up and turnover is low, slowing the recovery."

Asked why the banks don't seem to be playing their part in lending to help firms out of the downturn – a downturn some say the banks created – Mulvihill insists that banks have never been only about lending money.

"We are also there to protect and enhance business and help them through troubled times," he said. "Our simple message is: 'Talk to us'."

"People now have the mindset that banks are only doing business for themselves; that they have withdrawn from the SME lending market particularly, but we are very much open for business."

"The difference now is that we are committed to working in partnership with local businesses. Our aim is to help them achieve their ambitions by tailoring a strategy and finance package to suit them individually, using a wide array of funding and business solutions, and then to be around to ensure that things stay on track."

"Sometimes it's not about borrowing, but more restructuring. The recession followed a period of great expansion and growth, when maybe people took their eye off the ball financially."

"The team has years of knowledge and understanding and can recognise when customers need specialist help and support. It's a rare organisation that is not constantly looking for more value for money and to make its money work as hard as possible. Our aim is to ensure our customers are efficient and risk-free as possible and help them reach their full potential."

"We also have a lot of experience within our business team – there is myself and five area directors plus 60 relationship managers – so we are adept at picking up signs of stress in a company."

"We know which sectors are fairing best: health and farming are looking good, manufacturing has had a tough time but is tipped to do well, and franchising is healthy because lots of people are keen to try running their own business."

"We weigh everything on its merits, but it's also fair to say, as a bank, we have a responsibility to provide our customers with the right products and the right services at the right time."

He is also keen to dispel 'ivory tower' allegations made against banking: "We make a point of talking to local accountants and professionals and have met five MPs from across our area this year, and had some fantastic feedback."

Mulvihill is also proud that his team has thrown itself behind NatWest's community initiative, helping with school projects and a 100km charity walk, while many have taken key roles as sports coaches or school governors.

Indeed, many are only too happy to exchange the stereotypical banker's suit and don T-shirt, shorts and trainers in a good cause – a sharp contrast to when Mulvihill started with NatWest.

"I was working at the counter on a particularly hot day, so I took off my jacket, only for my manager to tell me off: 'You're not a waiter, are you? Put that jacket back on'."

"Nevertheless, it was hard for me to see banking as stuffy because my first branch was in London's trendy King's Road, with celebrities regularly to be seen around the local area."

"But it's a far more interesting industry today anyway, attracting a wider range of characters than you would think, while the business itself is very much about people and relationships."

Though based in modern offices in Dartford, far removed from his first branch counter, Mulvihill rarely has time to savour views of the nearby Dartford Crossing as he travels 10,000-15,000 miles a year seeing customers and contacts.

He lives in Welling with wife Joanne and young daughters Lucy and Abigail. He's a keen golfer and angler in his spare time – the Dartford view also includes a carp lake – and a passionate season-ticket-holder at West Ham United.

Careers advice kit for schools

A TOOLKIT created by Medway Youth Trust has been launched nationally to help all schools commission independent careers guidance and student support services.

From next year schools will be under a new legal duty to secure impartial advice for their students, which is currently provided by the local authority-funded Connexions service.

Medway Youth Trust chief executive Graham Clewes said: "This is the first time leaders in most schools will have needed to think about careers guidance in the context of commissioning rather than being partners in a publicly-funded service."

"We have kept headteachers and principals in Medway fully informed as government policy has developed. This practical toolkit extends that support but also responds to requests for support from institutions outside of Medway."

The toolkit guides schools and academies through a six-step cycle to securing careers services and includes tips to help schools focus their resources efficiently.

Work experience at power station

EDF Energy has offered work experience placements at Dungeness B power station to 10 students.

The two-week arrangement is part of a long-standing relationship the energy firm has with schools which specialise in science, technology, engineering, and maths subjects.

Each student has been given at least one employee at the station who they will shadow throughout their placement.

Dungeness B director Graham Finn said: "We are proud of the strong working relationship we have with local schools."

"This is our way of giving something back to the community and hopefully inspiring the next generation of budding nuclear scientists and engineers."

EDF Energy also runs a modern apprenticeship scheme at all its nuclear power stations, and will be taking on six new recruits at Dungeness B this month. The programme runs for four years, with the first two years spent at Royal Navy bases near Portsmouth.

Apprenticeship drive past halfway marker

By Steve Knight

steve.knight@archant.co.uk

MORE than 50 businesses have already signed up to Medway Council's challenge to provide 100 apprenticeships in 100 days.

The authority has joined forces with the National Apprenticeship Service to run the campaign, which aims to increase the number of firms willing to offer young people the chance to gain trade skills while earning a wage.

Jack Humphrey, 16, and Harri Stevenson, 18, are the two latest apprentices to have benefited from the scheme, having been taken on by the Strood-based haulage firm R Swain and Sons.

Harri said: "Doing an apprenticeship sets you up for a career and a future with a company."

"Finding work can be really difficult at my age. I think this scheme's a good idea as it will encourage employers to take on apprentices. I think young people can offer a lot to a business, as we grow to know it inside out."

Jack added: "I think it's important young people do an apprenticeship instead of going straight into work because you get a qualification and a good grounding in a company, their values, and the way they work."

"It's something my family have done and I'm looking forward to following in their footsteps."

Harri and Jack will be supported in their apprenticeship by Mainstream Training, which will help them gain their full HGV driving licences as well as qualifications in numeracy and literacy.

R Swain and Sons commercial director Paul Burridge said: "Apprentices are the future of our company and indeed our industry."

"All our apprentices gain a recognised qualification and at the same time get some real hands-on experience, from washing vehicles on their first day to gaining a fully-qualified HGV licence and a position with the firm."

The Medway 100 in 100 Apprenticeship Challenge launched in May and is aimed at encouraging more businesses in the towns to take on apprentices and realise the benefits they can bring to their company.

There are currently more than 1,500 apprentices in Medway with about 200 different courses on offer.

This is expected to increase in the coming years as the statutory age for young people to remain in education increases from 16 to 17 in 2013, and then to 18 in 2015.

Medway Council leader Cllr Rodney Chambers said: "This campaign is about reviving and championing the esteemed tradition of apprenticeships that were once at the heart of developing our local workforce here in Medway."

"I'm pleased to see so many businesses pledging support, and some already reaping the many benefits apprenticeships bring."

What is your business doing to help Keep Kent Working? Do you send employees on training courses to aid their personal development or run apprenticeship schemes? If you have a good news story email steve.knight@archant.co.uk or give him a call on 01303 817136.

Young inventors win enterprise award for 'Safelet' attack alarm

AN ATTACK alarm disguised as a bracelet has won a team of Ramsgate youngsters top honours in a business enterprise competition.

Known as the 'safelet', the device can be easily activated at the first sign of trouble to stun an attacker and make other people aware of trouble.

It was designed by Chatham and Clarendon Grammar School Federation students Carys Williams, Mairead Culien, Lily Wrist, Georgia Gibbs, Laura Saad and Emily Gore.

A team of judges were impressed with the idea and named the team's effort the 'Enterprise of the Year' in the Barclays Bank competition.

Another team from the same school took the honours for best written presentation for their product idea – Sunswipe.

Sunswipe is a wipe that contains suntan lotion, and which would be distributed in key locations such as theme parks and other visitor attractions to stop people burning.

The designers were Caitlin Spooner, Mary Turner, Chloe Wells, Natalie Renwick, Edie Plummer, Megan Gray and Rebecca Glanville.

Assistant headteacher Matthew Morley said: "This is a fantastic achievement."

"The girls in both teams clearly identified a gap in the market for their niche products and used a great deal of creativity in their design and presentation."

Construction prize for NCC apprentice

A YOUNG apprentice from Maidstone has been honoured at the National Construction College's annual awards.

Daniel Berkhauser, 25, who works for Ashford-based Sandells Maintenance, won the Year 2 flooring award at the college's Erith campus in front of friends, family members and industry representatives.

The college is the training division of CITB-ConstructionSkills, of which Andy Walder is deputy chairman.

He said: "As Europe's largest construction training provider, we work closely with employers to meet their training needs and pride ourselves on delivering specialist training that will give businesses a competitive edge to help them succeed and grow.

"Training and providing highly skilled apprentices, who are the lifeblood of our industry, is a key part of this so we are delighted to celebrate their achievements.

"Their apprenticeship, taught by highly-skilled instructors in top-class facilities, will be the best introduction they could wish for into our exciting sector.

Mercy dash to Hollywood for Enders' Bunmi

Fast-rising star on why she's happy to leave Albert Square to find fame in Tinseltown

THE sky is the limit for an actress from Medway as she relinquishes a coveted place on hit soap EastEnders to head for Hollywood and beyond. Bunmi Mojekwu, from Strood, has been in the show for the last 18 months but is setting her sights on making it as a top star.

The 22-year-old plays Mercy in the BBC One production, having joined it from internet spin-off series E20.

She said: "I got sent to the auditioning for E20. Lots of people were going for places, but the directors just couldn't find the person that they wanted for the role."

"I went in for auditions and I got some callbacks – it was a really long process and I thought there was no way I would get the part."

"It was crazy when I finally got a place on E20, but I also knew that I was never meant to go on to the main show, too."

"When the directors approached and asked me to be in the full EastEnders, and to have story-lines as well, it was a dream come true."

The former St Simon Stock School in Maidstone pupil started acting at 17 after a stint at a Saturday drama college in London.

She said: "It was just a little weekend thing. It turned out to be the right place at the right time because they had just started an agency there. I got put on to the list, started getting auditions and things just went from there, really."

Mojekwu moved down to Strood from Brixton when she was a teenager, and her appearances in EastEnders have seen a fan base develop.

She said: "It is bizarre as people feel like they know you because the show is so popular. When you go out they tend to gravitate towards you and speak to you like they have known you for years."

"Of course it is nice at times, but sometimes if you really just want to run into the shops quickly it can get a bit difficult. It's never a five-minute run any more – it takes half an hour trying to get through people, but that's cool."

"I am asked for pictures and autographs, especially around here because people know I live in Kent, so there is more of a buzz from locals."

Mojekwu is of Nigerian decent and plays troubled immigrant Mercy Olubnni in EastEnders alongside some of British TV's biggest stars. And, despite performing in Gone Too Far at The Royal Court Theatre in London aged just 17, and going on to star in Channel Four's Misfits and ITV's The Bill, she still gets a little star-struck on set.

She said: "I am cool with a lot of people, like Christian – see, I still call him by his character's name. That's bad. But sometimes I am just sitting there and Steve McFadden is sitting next to me, it is so crazy."

"That's when I thought 'Oh my god, this is actually real' and it all really started to kick in. It was life-changing."

But the actress, who has completed a business and media degree at Kingston University, is highly ambitious and setting her sights on moving away from one of the world's biggest soaps and finding new challenges.

She said: "Leaving was kind of a mutual thing

AMBITION: Bunmi Mojekwu, left, as Mercy in EastEnders, is ready for fresh challenges after soap stint

– it was coming towards the end of the character's journey. I felt it was time for me to come off the back of this and challenge myself before I became a bit too rooted in the show.

"I didn't want that to happen, so I definitely feel comfortable coming out of EastEnders now. I have gained enough exposure and I want to move on to bigger things."

Soap stars often have the never-say-never attitude to returning and many will be recycled in years to come, with fresh story-lines offering a way back in for out-of-work actors.

But Mojekwu is determined that once she leaves Albert Square she will make her own way in the acting business.

She said: "I have a couple of things lined up – we are in talks at the moment, so I am crossing my fingers and waiting for the green light."

"Although I love EastEnders, I wouldn't return – I am not a believer in going backwards. I like to go forwards and that chapter is definitely closed, but I had a great time there."

Mojekwu's Nigerian background has also earned her fame in the West African nation and the Medway performer is planning on making an appearance there at some point.

She said: "They have a thing called Nollywood, so I would like to do that and then Hollywood and Bollywood... all the woods!"

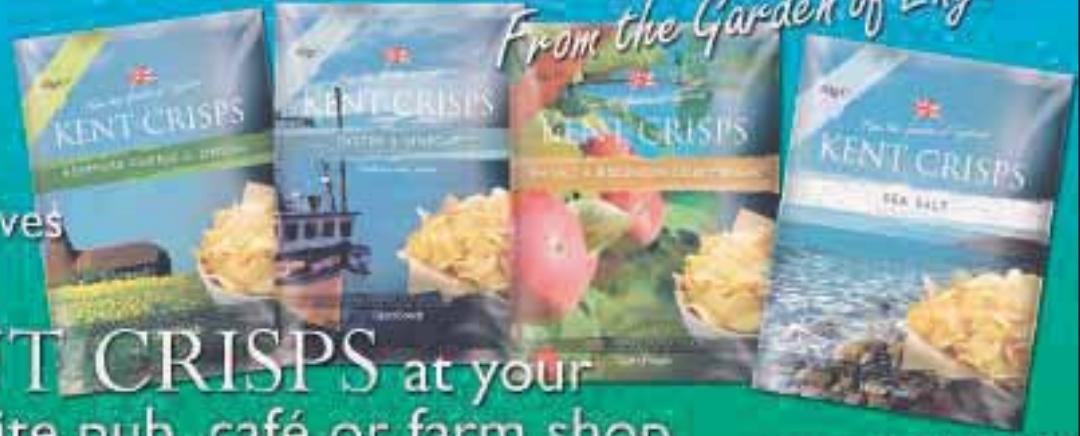

And Mojekwu has the belief that she can go all the way to the top, as even from an early age she knew what she wanted to do.

"I have always wanted to do something related to acting, but I didn't know how to do it. It was all just a dream."

"A lot of people tell me stories of how they got in, and I didn't really have to do as much as them – so I feel like it was meant to be."

OPULENCE: The grand staircase onboard the Titanic demonstrated the huge sums spent on the ship

Relive the horror and wealth of the Titanic

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

RARE and unseen artefacts salvaged from the Titanic are being displayed in a moving exhibition at the Historic Dockyard Chatham.

Titanic Honour and Glory, voted as one of the top five exhibitions in the country, features emotive objects belonging to passengers and crew who were onboard the doomed vessel.

China dinner plates, which served the first meals aboard the ship, a fountain pen belonging to the captain, silverware, letters, linen and the crew's possessions, including an 18 carat gold pocket watch, which was owned by waiter Vincenzo Giliardino, a teddy bear belonging to an engineer, and a fur coat of one of the survivors, will also be on display.

Visitors can also see a silver pocket watch recovered by the Cable Ship Mackay Bennett, one of the first ships chartered to search for bodies in the aftermath of the tragedy. The watch stopped at 2.28am, just as the liner entered the icy water on the fateful night of April 15, 1912.

Alongside original artefacts are examples of the luxurious interiors of the Titanic's sister ships Olympic and Britannic, as well as props and costumes from James Cameron's 1997 Oscar-winning film Titanic, including costumes worn by Leonardo DiCaprio and Billy Zane.

The exhibition was the brainchild of Sean Szmac and his partner Margot Corson.

Mr Szmac's fascination with

JEWEL: Heart of the Ocean worn by Kate Winslet in Titanic

The Titanic began when he was aged five and he saw the film A Night to Remember.

He said: "This diverse exhibition appeals to so many people from all age groups. With the exhibition we aim to increase the knowledge of Titanic's history, that of her sister ships and the White Star Line, which owned and operated many of what were the finest liners that had ever sailed the oceans of the world."

"We've just had it confirmed that the Heart of the Ocean worn by Kate Winslet in the film Titanic is going to be available for people to try on and have their photograph taken with from July 20."

An interactive dressing up area and the dockyard's own reproduction of Titanic's bow will enable visitors to recreate the famous scene featuring Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet on the bow of the liner in the celebrated film.

"There are so many elements to it. There is the human side, the enormous loss of life, and the accounts of the survivors.

"There is the class system, which was strictly enforced even in the face of disaster, which can be seen in the survivor statistics and which even at the time caused outcry.

"You have the bravery of the engineers who went to their deaths trying to do all they could, and the famous band which kept playing.

"Then there is the opulence of the ship itself and the claim that it was virtually unsinkable. It was very much an event which changed so much in the world and really came to symbolise the impending changes in society as World War One approached."

The display, which runs until September 30 in No 1 Smithery The Gallery at the dockyard, has come to Kent as part of its centenary tour in the run up to the 100th anniversary of the tragedy, which claimed the lives of 1,517 people.

Gail James, from the Historic Dockyard, said: "The exhibition hasn't been to Kent before despite all the maritime history, so we're really pleased it's here."

"We've just had it confirmed that the Heart of the Ocean worn by Kate Winslet in the film Titanic is going to be available for people to try on and have their photograph taken with from July 20."

An interactive dressing up area and the dockyard's own reproduction of Titanic's bow will enable visitors to recreate the famous scene featuring Leonardo DiCaprio and Kate Winslet on the bow of the liner in the celebrated film.

Sandwich sandwich filling obvious gap in the market

Ed Hill reports on the popular Cinque Port that's using its unique name as a selling point to promote the town

THE Fourth Earl of Sandwich was supposedly the first man to come up with the idea of placing something tasty between two slices of bread, but the connection with the town has rarely been exploited.

Now a new product has been created not only promoting east Kent, but local produce, too.

Michael Hancock, from Destination Alliances, who helped come up with the idea, said: "It started as a Sandwich tourism initiative. It is a not-for-profit company set up by three businesses in the town – The Bell Hotel, Sandwich Leisure Park and The Secret Gardens – along with a contribution from the town council.

"They wanted to promote the town but in a way that would also generate some income so it would be sustainable. The profit generated by selling the sandwiches will go back in to promoting the town."

The Sandwich Guild was created to come up with recipe ideas for the Sandwich sandwich and help market the product.

Each of the sandwiches is linked to a historical occupation and a place in the town. There are names such as the Bellman, Gardener and Wheelwright.

Mr Hancock said: "A lot of people don't realise there is an association between a sandwich and a place. There was a realisation that actually this had not been done before."

The guild wanted a high-end product that would reflect what it felt was best about the area.

Artisan baker Paul Hollywood (from TV's The Great British Bake Off) was brought in to help create a recipe for a traditional Kentish huffkin that would be the bread for the sandwich.

So far there are three flavours in the range: salted beef, cheese and chutney and pork and apple, all with added fine ingredients.

A fourth sandwich, connecting with the area's golfing heritage and called Caddymaster, will soon be available. All the ingredients come from within a 30-mile radius of Sandwich.

Mr Hancock said: "We have things like Kentish cobnuts, local chutneys from Kent Fine Foods.

USING THEIR LOAF: The Sandwich Guild was created to come up with recipe ideas and to market the Sandwich sandwich

We are trading on the town of Sandwich, so the provenance of the food is key to the product."

The sandwiches were launched at the town's farmers' market in June, and locals were asked to try the new products and comment.

Mr Hancock said: "The reaction to tasting the sandwiches has been very enthusiastic. The feedback from food-producers in Kent is also very positive."

"We now have other businesses who want to get involved and who want to create their own sandwiches."

The napkins the sandwiches are packaged in will be printed with information about the town.

A competition has also been created so people can come up with their own recipes.

The ultimate winner will share in a portion of the profits made from the sales. And the group behind the new snack has big plans for the brand.

Mr Hancock said: "We are planning to launch more sandwiches in the coming months. The next phase for us is to finalise the commercial production and get local businesses to sell them."

"The Bell Hotel and Secret Gardens have started and we want to increase that, but ultimately we would like to get them into the larger retailers and supermarkets so we can get the revenue."

Chain is strong but missing link leaves it shy of special

THE UK-wide restaurant group Table Table is one of the few chain eateries that I had never previously frequented.

I didn't even know there was one lying just off of the Thanet Way in Herne Bay, so naturally I was curious to give it a try, even if I was a little late to the party.

The group, which was taken over by Whitbread in 2008, says it offers good food for good value, but I have heard this many times before from other, ostensibly similar, chains.

The first thing I noticed was the difference in décor and spacing compared with other chain restaurants.

There was no open space in which to cram as many covers as possible and the carefully-picked furniture just served to close in the tables for a more atmospheric and warm experience.

The first variation in this menu compared with other chains is that although it does offer the burger-and-chips-type main meals from under £5, the range is also spread to capture a more sophisticated diner.

My guest and I opted for one of the four starter platters, which provided a surprising Continental-style offering of cured meats, baked Camembert, drunken cranberry compotes and pickled onions at a wholly fair £11.

For the main course I opted for a traditional slow-cooked lamb shank shepherd's pie at £9.75. This was accompanied by a side dish of carrots and tender stemmed broccoli. But it wasn't the tender meat sticking out of the mash that caught my eye, it was the back of the specials menu, which used a map of the UK to highlight the location from where the ingredients for this dish originated. A nice touch.

The meat and vegetables were delicious, although the mash was a little dry – other than that, it was a very good and filling meal. With a little more thought, it could have been excellent.

The dessert menu was again appetising and offered a wide selection of sweet and savoury treats, so we went for the tasting plate at £5.50, opting for Eton mess, Belgian waffles smothered in chocolate and profiteroles.

The profiteroles were superb and I was assured the mess was superb as I only managed a small spoonful of it before it had disappeared. The waffles were a little hard and over-cooked but still tasty enough.

All in all, for the range of price and food choice, Table Table is perfect for family dinners and groups as nobody will be disappointed. With a little more attention to detail, the food could also compete for diners looking for something a bit special, too.

Make a night of it for real taste of the easy life

TOP-CLASS hotels are not just about the bedroom, bar and spa facilities any more. Instead, customers who travel from far and wide to visit Kent need to be assured of a top-quality meal, too.

Walking along the downs or skimming stones over the sea is a surefire way to get up your appetite, and a good hotel restaurant with an excellent menu can be the most convenient and pleasurable way to satisfy hungry guests.

Hotel restaurants are no longer reserved strictly for the people staying within the building, and daytrippers and food connoisseurs look to put these eateries to the test.

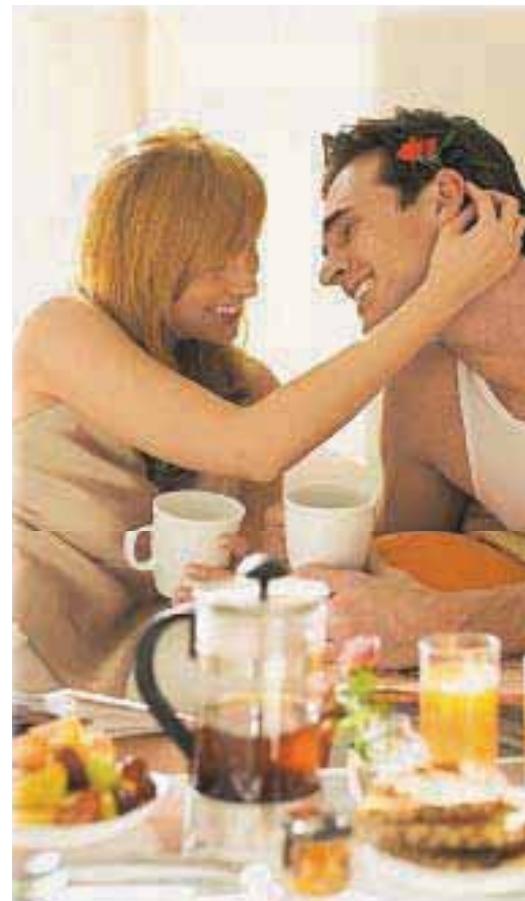

Trying out new restaurants is more than just a pleasant way to spend a Friday evening, with more and more people taking up the serious hobby of dining out weekly to try new venues and fresh dishes. This is action which hotels are determined to be a part of.

There is a growing number of hotel dining rooms associating themselves with top chefs or culinary celebrities as they look to attract custom from the street as well as the bedrooms upstairs.

The advantages of having a decent chef and superb menu within a hotel are there for all to see.

With a hotel eatery, there is no need for diners to worry about paying for a taxi home or having to limit the amount of wine they drink with their glorious meal. They can stay and make a night of it, finishing at their own leisure before wandering upstairs to a comfortable bed. Here are six of the best hotel restaurants from around the county.

The Waterfront Dover Marina

Enjoy fresh air and fun when you explore the gardens of this remarkable estate

SISSINGHURST Castle, near Cranbrook, is more than just a stunningly beautiful National Trust garden. It was the estate's landscape, 460 acres of Wealden countryside, that inspired the creation of the world-class garden and the prolific writing of Vita Sackville-West. Visitors today can experience hours of outdoor fun exploring the varied estate grounds, the garden and the many events held at Sissinghurst Castle this year.

Now the trust has introduced 'way-marking posts' to help walkers find their way along the 11.2 miles (18km) of accessible estate paths at Sissinghurst Castle, ensuring everyone can see the best of Sissinghurst. There are picturesque short and long walks with views over rolling countryside, tranquil lakes and streams, natural habitats and acres of ancient woodland teeming with wildlife.

The garden offers a sensory paradise for all and attracts visitors across the globe. It is set in the ruins of an Elizabethan mansion, with the iconic tower still standing, along with many of the boundary walls.

The original design still exists today, with different garden rooms ensuring colour, beauty and perfume throughout the season. Highlights include the famed white garden and sweet-smelling rose garden.

The newly-developed vegetable garden can be seen from the main garden and also from the many walks surrounding the estate. You can enjoy looking at and tasting the produce, both at the vegetable garden stall and also at the newly-refurbished Granary restaurant.

Throughout the summer holidays and also in the October half-term, Sissinghurst Castle will be running children's trails (there is an interactive map with fun activities to do at each given point) through the estate, making Sissinghurst the perfect family day out in the countryside.

For yet another reason to visit Sissinghurst Castle this year, come and see its biggest and arguably best event of the year, the Smallholding Fair on Saturday and Sunday, August 13-14.

Food writer and presenter Hugh Fearnley Whittingstall, of River Cottage Farm, is the star guest this year.

The fair will delight those who want to produce and rear their own food, as well as those who enjoy seeing and tasting local produce. There will be demonstrations from flour-milling to ferrets, and working horses and alpacas for the children to meet and enjoy.

VARIETY: A trip to explore Sissinghurst offers a wealth of outdoor and family fun to keep you entertained

Hugh will be joined by Sissinghurst residents Sarah Raven – a garden and cookery writer-presenter – and author Adam Nicolson, grandson of Vita Sackville West and Harold Nicolson, as well as other star guests.

Finally, for those who love food as well as fresh air, the Smallholding Fair will be showcasing the finest that The Weald has to offer, including a Kentish beer tent, a barbecue with locally-reared meat, traditional English tea tent and delicious handmade ice-creams.

The fair is open to all the public and costs £4 for adults and £1 for children.

For more information about the garden, estate or the Smallholding Fair, call 01580 710700 or visit www.nationaltrust.org.uk/sissinghurst.

New village green's roots originate in New England

A COLLECTION of mature New England-style trees, up to 30 years old, has been planted at Holborough Lakes in Snodland, where developer Berkeley has begun work on the new village green.

The group of established oak, pine, maple and birch trees have all been selected to complement the style which has been adopted in the design of the development.

With the help of landscape architects Murdoch Wickham, a variety of trees was chosen typical to those found in New England, including the northern red oak, the most common of the red oak species in New England.

The silver maple is native to New England and is named after the light frosty-green colour of the undersides of its leaves. Thin petioles give the tree a shimmering effect in a light breeze.

To ensure the Berkeley quality standard, each tree is more than 10 years old, with the pin oak averaging 30 years old, thus creating an established avenue of trees that will lead to the new green open space.

Also chosen for their plethora of colours, the trees combine to offer a fusion of rich colour to create a beautiful scene in the autumn – something for which the region of New England is famous worldwide.

The red maple is best known for its brilliant deep scarlet foliage, while the Himalayan birch complements with leaves that turn golden-yellow during the autumn.

John Murdoch, of Murdoch Wickham, said: "The new village green will provide the whole community with a perfect place to enjoy the great outdoors, creating a great place for a family picnic, local event and communal activities."

"The introduction of the extensive range of mature trees rather than using young saplings demonstrates Berkeley's commitment to the local area."

The focal point of the new village green will be a circular grassed open space surrounded by trees, shrubs and seating areas.

The avenue of trees will lead to the open space, which will include a new community pavilion, marketing suite, natural play area and keep-fit elements including a trim trail.

Holborough Lakes offers a combination of New England-designed one- and two-bedroom apartments and three-, four- and five-bedroom houses.

Designed in a range of pastel-shaded weatherboarding and featuring E balconies or gardens, all of the apartments and houses benefit from a contemporary specification specially designed to add cosmopolitan style while complementing the New England look.

House prices continue to fall as regional gap widens

THE latest report from the Land Registry's House Price Index shows that prices over the last 12 months have fallen by 2.5 per cent, leaving the cost of the average UK property at £161,479.

There was no change from May to June, but there is a wide regional variation, with the South East and London performing best. The only area in the UK to see a rise in house prices over the 12 months is London, which averaged a 0.8 per cent increase in the year to June, 2011.

The North East had the worst figures for the year and the month. The annual decrease in house prices was 7.1 per cent and the monthly fall was 2.1 per cent.

The report reveals that completed house sales in April 2011, the latest month for which data are available, fell by 7 per cent to 48,704 from 52,272 in April 2010.

Nicholas Ayre, director of UK buying agents Home Fusion, said: "There's plenty here for the doomsayers to get their teeth stuck into. In June the national figure was totally flat, and even in the London bubble, average prices fell for a second month. But just a quick health warning – the data can be fickle. Just as your car's fuel gauge becomes unreliable when the engine's running on empty, so these figures have less value when the number of sales is so low.

"Outside London, demand has fallen off a cliff and, unsurprisingly, so have prices. We're seeing a big divergence between the prime market and the rest. Less fashionable areas appear more of a buyers' market, with a big gap opening between asking and sale prices. And because there is more supply and fewer buyers, those looking to buy can afford to be pickier.

"But for the whole of the country the market is still fragile. With lenders still reluctant to offer mortgages, and many who bought in the boom trapped by negative equity, there's little chance it will perk up any time soon."

Picanto grows in stature

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

LOOKING back, the arrival of the original Kia Picanto in 2004 was pivotal for the increasingly confident Korean brand – one of the world's fastest growing.

Not only was the little five-door city car typically good value, but it was also pleasant to drive, seemingly bulletproof and cheap to run.

Laterly, it also benefited from Kia's tempting and unique seven-year/100,000-mile warranty.

A tough act to follow, then? Not a bit. Kia has pulled off another major advance on what has gone before, in the same way that it did recently with its Sportage and Sorento SUVs.

And where the original Picanto's styling looked lightweight, its replacement benefits from the hand of Peter Schreyer – the genius behind the original Audi TT and now Kia's design guru.

You cannot do much about the small-wheel-at-each-corner format that goes with the tiniest end of the car market, but Schreyer's team has created an imposing yet compact and highly practical five-door design nevertheless.

It boasts impressive cabin space, including excellent head and legroom, despite being just 60mm longer than its predecessor. Three adults can be carried in the back over short journeys, and a long journey certainly wouldn't be hard for two people travelling in the rear.

The boot is also an improvement on the old car, which was one of the smallest in class; the new car marks a 25 per cent improvement to 200 litres. It is still a way behind the Ford Ka and the Picanto's obvious rival and group stablemate, the Hyundai i10, but it's still a useful plus point.

If the previous Picanto had a weakness, it was in the use of durable yet hard plastics; the new car has the look and feel of greater quality, though one of the test car's retractable

KIA BABY:

The new Picanto is more spacious, looks, feels and drives better than its predecessor and is further proof of the Korean brand's strength in the city-car market cupholders gave up the ghost with the first press of the button – a rare weakness that Kia will surely put right.

The long wheelbase that contributes to the roominess also delivers an impressive ride for this class and contributes to road manners that better the previous car in all departments.

Not only can it be hurtled about with enthusiasm in its intended urban environment, but also on winding rural roads, and yet it can cruise the motorway with good refinement.

The new line-up (from £7,995) comes with a full complement of safety equipment, including electronic stability control and six airbags and, as ever with Kia, generous standard kit with front electric windows and a height-adjustable driver's seat partnered with tiltable steering wheel. You must trade up to the 'Air' model (£8,595), though, to get air-con as standard.

Seats are firm but comfortable – there were plenty of compliments on that front when I crammed five people in for a 15-minute drive.

Engine choice is limited to two Kappa series petrol units, shared with partner brand Hyundai. They are tried, tested and deliver low emissions and good economy. The three-cylinder 68bhp 1.0-litre entry unit is lively enough (0-60mph in 13.9 seconds) and all versions are road tax-exempt thanks to their low emissions.

They will also average almost 70mpg, which rather makes you wonder why anyone would buy the entry model for the bigger 84bhp 1.25-litre four-cylinder line-up, the 2 EcoDynamics, tested here.

It's nippier (0-60mph in 11 seconds), also road tax-exempt and delivers comparable economy to the 1.0-litre; and it comes with an engine stop-go system to save fuel and emissions in busy traffic. However, it costs £10,195 – some £600 more than a 1.0 of equivalent trim and £2,200 more than the cheapest 1.0.

And Picanto pricing overall will be even keener when a three-door version arrives in the final quarter of this year.

MINI gets the London look

MINI-dealers are selling a limited-edition Soho version of the hatchback and convertible models in the line-up. The BMW brand is now naming all Mini specials after London locations. Prices for the Soho models start at £16,765 and include exclusive 'White Silver' metallic paint, 17-inch alloys, bi-Xenon headlights and a rather sporty interior.

Focus models Studio looks

ACCESS to the popular five-door Ford Focus will be eased by the new Studio model, on sale in September as the rush for a '61-plate' begins. It becomes the new entry model at £13,995 and comes with 16-inch alloys, rear spoiler, USB connectivity, air-con, electric door mirrors, electronic stability programme, and an 84bhp 1.6-litre petrol engine averaging almost 50mpg.

Spacious new BMW 1-Series

BMW'S second-generation 1-Series hatchback arrives on September 17, with a choice of three diesel and two petrol engines. Prices start at £19,375. The only rear-wheel drive car in its class, it also has BMW's fuel and emissions-saving EfficientDynamics technologies. Larger than its predecessor, a longer wheelbase makes it more spacious and comfortable.

New Lookers dealership proves real eye-opener

LOOKERS has held an official opening of its all-new Mercedes-Benz and Smart dealership at Maidstone's Motor City site in Park Wood.

The evening ceremony attracted hundreds of customers and well-wishers and included a fashion show, F1 race-simulator and giant Scalextric circuit.

But the real stars were the cars, past and present, from a classic original 1950s 300SL 'gull-wing' sports car – the fastest production car of its day – to its modern-day equivalent, the £184,000 SLS AMG that shares its eye-catching gull-wing-doors format.

It was also a chance to celebrate one of the newest sporting arrivals in the range, the SLK folding hardtop roadster.

The new showroom follows the German marque's imposing steel and glass corporate format and echoes the premium status of its cars, but Keith Jackman, Lookers marketing director for Kent and Sussex, said: "We are keen to dispel the perception that our cars are expensive to buy and run against equivalent Fords, Vauxhalls and Toyotas.

"Many people come into the showroom and see the figures, then say 'I never realised I could afford a Mercedes-Benz'.

BIG LAUNCH: The opening ceremony at the all-new Lookers showroom was well attended "And if you want really cheap motoring, there is also the Smart. There are 0 per cent finance deals and other incentives at present. You can run a new one for as little as £99 a month and with minimal running costs – the diesel is the most economical production car on UK roads.

"We've also responded to our customers' comments about servicing costs and brought in servicing plans – it can be as little as £22 a month on an A-Class."

Lookers Mercedes-Benz runs three other sites in Kent, in Ashford, Tonbridge and Canterbury.

New Registration '61

STUNNING: Order books are open for the three-door coupe version of the Vauxhall Astra, known as the GTC. The Astra range is currently fifth in the UK car-sales top 10 – the GTC's imminent arrival should boost that rating considerably

Incentives served up on a '61 plate

ECONOMIC gloom and doom continues, so it is hardly surprising that new-car sales have been in the doldrums, too.

But there are actually sound reasons for splashing the cash on a new '61-plate motor from September 1st if you are in a steady job.

After all, a new house – the big-ticket item in anyone's budget – is a scary option in such uncertain times, but anyone who has savings earning a pittance might make more of them through driving a hard bargain on a car.

Manufacturers and forecourts are desperate to deal and there is a new realism about list prices anyway as the trade recognises that these fairytale figures deter genuine private buyers, thereby outweighing their intended benefit: to convince fleet buyers of fantastic bulk-buy discounts and to give dealers room to manoeuvre on deals and part-exchanges.

Other incentives in a tough market include superb packages on finance – which banks aren't keen to match – insurance and servicing.

There are also outstanding warranties available, such as Kia's industry-beating seven-year/100,000-mile package, Hyundai's five-year/unlimited-miles deal and Vauxhall's 'lifetime' guarantee on cars up to 100,000 miles.

Servicing deals often cost extra but can be very cost-effective, so ask about those.

EMISSIONS-BUSTER: Kia's classy Ceed family hatchback in eco-friendly Ecodynamics form

ECO-WARRIOR: Honda CR-V – the economical British-built SUV has argued successfully that 4x4s can be green

Remember, too, that road tax also favours downsizing and changing to a leaner and meaner motor: many small cars and family hatchbacks now qualify for zero road tax in year one and modest charges thereafter.

Diesels have won over many sceptics with their economy and good low-down power delivery – sales of this type rose 7.5 per cent over the first six months of 2011.

But petrol power is fighting back, particularly at the lower end of the market.

The fuel itself is set to stay cheaper than diesel simply because oil-refining capacity is geared more to the former.

Petrol engines are also cheaper to buy upfront and lighter, and while they still cannot compete on economy with diesels, it is savings elsewhere that quietly add up: less wear and tear on tyres and front-end mechanicals.

Small and efficient turbocharged petrol units also make a difference in small cars – they are nimble and nicer to drive.

And petrol engine emissions are being lowered steadily, so their road tax and emissions credentials are far better; average new-car CO₂ emissions overall fell to a record low of 138.9g/km in the second quarter of this year.

Factor in all of the above and the sums start to add up on ditching something dated and less efficient in favour of a modern and more eco-friendly model – it might be better for your wallet and your well-being than leaving the money in the bank.

BEST IN RED? But seen increasingly in white – the Alfa Romeo Giulietta sporting five-door

CRUISING IN RED: The new Chevrolet Cruze hatchback version cuts a dash in vibrant red

Colour: what's hot and what's not

IT'S wise to strike a balance between expressing your personality and exerting practicality in choosing a car colour.

You may want sell on at some stage and, like a hideous 1970s bathroom suite, find that 'Acid Green' or 'Latte Brown' is not quite to everyone's taste.

But playing safe can be a turn-off to would-be buyers, so here is the motor-trade body, the SMMT's league table and some pros and cons:

1 Black (24.7 per cent). The perennial favourite but looks dirty quickly and shows little scratches or the swirling effect from overuse of mechanical car washes.

2 Silver (21.4). Still riding high and it hides scratches and carwash abrasion well but is increasingly seen as the boring or safe option.

3 Blue (16.5). Conservative yet smart, but very dark blue is best avoided.

4 Grey metallic (14.4). More assertive and upmarket than silver?

5 Red (10.2). Had fallen away due to a tendency to turn pinker with age, but better finishes and use on sportier models have helped stabilise figures.

6 White (10). Has shot back up the charts. It is usually a no-cost option, handles wear and tear well and also reflects the heat.

Buyers find small is beautiful

DOWNSIZING continues to be the UK motor market's buzzword.

Some 20 years ago, the family saloon/company-car sector was dominant, largely thanks to the company-car culture where big and brash was beautiful.

Then came the rise of the family hatchback and supermini; throughout the Nineties and early Noughties they had a ding-dong battle for market leadership.

However, helped by soaring fuel and insurance costs, greater environmental awareness and then by Government legislation via punitive road tax on larger cars, ever-more stylish superminis comprise some 40 per cent of sales if you include the even smaller city-car segment – family hatchbacks had to settle for the No2 spot with about 25 per cent of registrations.

More difficult to quantify, though, is the trend towards 'crossovers' – cars like the Nissan Qashqai, Skoda Yeti and Peugeot 3008.

As the name implies, they straddle several sectors including family hatchback, MPV (multi-purpose vehicle) or people-carrier and SUV (Sports Utility Vehicle) and are hard to pigeonhole under current classifications.

Many manufacturers have already tried to apply the sexy new crossover label to what would once have been their SUV models – especially as the 4x4/SUV sector

SIZE MATTERS: Family cars no longer dominate the UK sales top 10, especially when superminis like Honda's Swindon-built Jazz have acquired people-carrier flexibility has declined – and we can expect an industry reappraisal of how classes are defined and counted.

This could then show a burgeoning third sector comprising the new-age crossover designs.

In the meantime, registration figures so far this year from motor-industry mouthpiece, the SMMT, show how superminis (S) and family hatchbacks (H) rule the UK top 10:

1	Ford Fiesta (S)
2	Ford Focus (H)
3	Vauxhall Corsa (S)
4	VW Golf (H)
5	Vauxhall Astra (H)
6	Vauxhall Insignia
7	VW Polo (S)
8	BMW 3-Series
9	Nissan Qashqai
10	Mini (S/H)

COMPACT: Renault's Clio exemplifies the sort of supermini style that is making it easier to downsize

BIG-HEARTED: Hyundai's little i10 has really put the Korean brand in the consumer eye. It's a compact, spacious and versatile five-door city star.

Volkswagens at EuroCanterbury now come with free fuel* and free servicing.[†]

Given what's happened to prices at the pump, we think our offer is a pretty good incentive to buy a new Volkswagen. As if you needed any more incentive to buy a car from a range that already comes with 3 years or 30,000 miles of free servicing when you take advantage of our helpful finance offers. Drop by soon for a test drive.

Vans for our times

VAN design has been revolutionised over the past decade or so.

Operators have seen economy, efficiency and flexibility soar, while drivers have enjoyed better performance, refinement and safety.

Initially, this was confined to smaller models derived from cars and included air-con and a decent sound system, but the same philosophy has since migrated to larger vans.

The range of van capacities has also widened, varying from as little as three cubic metres for a car-derived hatchback used by a courier company or perhaps as a small company's runabout, right up to a 17-cubic-metre delivery van.

Access has improved, too. Many larger vans have low floors in the driving compartment for easy access and most vehicles above the supermini class now come with at least one sliding door as standard to aid loading – many buyers also take up the option of a second 'slider'.

There is now a choice usually of side-opening twin doors or a high-lift tailgate as well, while cab doors generally have a reduced opening angle, with the double benefit of making it easy for a busy driver to grab the handle to close the door and also avoid it swinging wide and hitting something.

Petrol-driven vans have been all but been displaced by the better economy and range, plus pulling power low down in the rev range, of four- and five-cylinder diesels.

Diesel-operating benefits are then compounded by extended service periods, lower maintenance costs and longer-lasting parts.

The engine's partner – the gearbox – has also undergone a change. A six-speed manual gearbox is normally the standard – a couple of cogs better than only a few years ago – but urban operators are turning increasingly to automatic, semi-automatic or clutchless transmissions.

These can usually be driven with manual selection anyway but are ideal for the stop-start traffic conditions of the town and city and can be as economical as a manual.

Van safety has also improved. Along with various airbags, there are active safety features including anti-lock braking (ABS), traction control (TCS), braking control (EBC) and electronic stability programme (ESP).

LEICESTERSHIRE FOXES V KENT SPITFIRES

Kent Spitfires at full-strength for defining game of the year

By Glenn Pearson

glenn.pearson@archant.co.uk

A PLACE at Twenty20 finals day is up for grabs as Kent Spitfires prepare for their biggest game of the season against Leicestershire Foxes at Grace Road this evening.

The Spitfires will name a full-strength side for the Friends Life t20 quarter-final as Kent bid to make it four finals day appearances in the last five years.

Skipper Rob Key and fellow opening batsman Joe Denly confirmed their return from injury by playing in the LV= County Championship game against Leicestershire this week, while the side will also be boosted by the inclusion of overseas fast bowlers Wahab Riaz and Charl Langeveldt – the latter due to play his first game since Kent qualified from the South Group with victory at Essex on July 15.

With Key likely to stick with a tried and tested formula in the 20-over format, there's only one place up for grabs in the side with teenager Adam Ball the man expected to be named.

The 18-year-old left-arm seamer has been a major highlight for Kent this season and his availability after leading England under-19s in their series against South Africa, means he will get the nod over Matt Coles, Alex Blake, Simon Cook and Robbie Joseph.

Kent's director of cricket,

Paul Farbrace, has been confident throughout the summer that his side could progress in this competition and the 44-year-old has urged the Spitfires to put in another performance and make finals day at Edgbaston on August 27.

"We have been beating big sides and I've said right the way through Twenty20, we are capable of qualifying," he said.

"People have laughed at me and thought I was stupid, but even after the two games at Tunbridge Wells which we lost, I still thought we had a chance of winning through.

"We've got good balance with four international bowlers and an exciting batting line-up and we've now got a selection dilemma going into the quarter-final and it's great to be in that position.

"Having got to the quarter-final we want to get to the next stage which is the semi-final and final, and we want to win the thing. I would be gutted if we don't win at Grace Road because I genuinely believe we have the team to win the Twenty20 Cup."

Leicestershire welcome back star batsman James Taylor, who missed the championship game to lead the England Lions against Sri Lanka A at Scarborough, and overseas all-rounder Andrew McDonald, who is the leading run scorer in this year's Twenty20 Cup.

Play starts at 5pm.

GILLINGHAM V CHELTENHAM TOWN

Hessenthaler urges Gillingham to get promotion bid on track from day one GILLINGHAM open their League Two campaign against Cheltenham Town this afternoon keen to avoid the slow start which proved so costly to their promotion hopes last season.

A 1-1 draw with the Robins at Priestfield on the opening day 12 months ago marked the start of a run which yielded just three wins from their first 19 games in all competitions.

The Gills again begin at home to Cheltenham, but manager Andy Hessenthaler wants it to be the only similarity this time around.

"We want to hit the ground running and get a win on Saturday," he said. "A better start would be a win because we got a draw last year against the same opposition."

"They're going to be big and strong, get the ball from back to front quickly. They won't mess around and will play a very quick tempo. We've got to match it and not fall into the trap of playing the same way. We want to move it round and enjoy the football. It's a good test, the pressure is on us at home."

After a busy summer, Gillingham's starting XI could include up to seven debuts for new players. Other than Adam Birchall (knee) the only injury doubt is Stefan Payne (groin), while Hessenthaler's main selection dilemma is in goal, where Ross Flitney and Paulo Gazzaniga are battling for the number one jersey.

Even with the blow of losing Birchall for most of the season, Hessenthaler expects much more from his side than last season, when they missed out on the play-offs on goal difference.

He said: "We know what we've got to do and if we're consistent over 46 games we will be higher than the play-offs."

"It's not an easy league to get out of, but we are capable."

NEW: Danny Kedwell is set for his league debut

Managers get last chance to fine tune

THE competitive season is just one week away for the county's Conference and Kent League sides, so this afternoon's friendly fixtures represent a dress rehearsal for the big kick-off.

Bromley's home game against a Chelsea XI is the most eye-catching, even if there are unlikely to be many recognisable names on the Blues' team sheet.

Dover Athletic won 12-1 against Oostende a week ago and will be hoping for a tougher test when they visit Ryman Premier side Billericay Town.

Conference South new boys Tonbridge Angels host traditional rivals Maidstone United, while Dartford and Ebbsfleet United are away to Canvey Island and Erith & Belvedere respectively.

Hythe Town and Herne Bay meet at Reachfields in the Kent League Challenge Shield.
